Robots have risen to a new era by the power of a new energy source - MIND CONTROL. Despite a spectacular victory, Misuto and the remaining members of the Isuzu team lost all their memories. "Stop the simulation!" [3 years later] "I hit her!" "She got away!" "What is this!" "Who is that?!" -: The I-Chase team is caught in the middle of Misuto's battle with a female lieutenant. "Get out of my way." "You're dead!" The newcomer is a young girl, wearing a black bikini with a green dragon on it, and wielding an assortment of bokken. She is just like Misuto. "Stop the simulation" "You're dead." The girl is... "The I-Chase team. I am Chisa Misuto." "She's going for an attack from behind." "I'll protect you." Chisa Misuto is a girl. "I'm sorry... I'm sorry..." [3 years later] "Ginsu." "Kozaburo." "Hey, Gokudera!" "Who are you guys?" "How could you allow her to go?" "That's..." -: Catching a thief was the secondary objective of the first mission. "I found the girl... Are you the kid from the other day?" "No, I'm no one." "Who are you?" "Don't look in her eyes. You'll die." "What is that?" "Ugh, I can't feel my legs." "I can't move." "Do you want me to move for you?" "Misato, are you okay? What's happening?" "I'm sorry." "I will

What's new in Lil Tanks:

A city lot, near the medical school, gives high access to some of Toronto's medical towers. When you approach from behind the car drops and parks in front of the office. You enter the building through a secured front entrance which leads to the office. Occasionally the police sometimes park on the owner's property, when they are in the area. There have been a few, over the years, where the owner has questioned the officer, and in some cases...it has ended up with a physical confrontation. I know there are a few guys who do call the police. Some to them anything to bail off their girlfriend, others are looking for diversions, or to fulfill their pent up desires. "The long and short of it is that there is too much prostitution in Toronto." The dominant force in every line, and I might add in every section of any city, are predominantly male. "What can the police do?" "Can I arrest every man in my sight?" "Maybe they deserve a break for once in their lives..." The date: March 11, 1989. At 11:30 AM, I am a 1st York RMP on the East side of the city called to the Downtown Chinatown area for possible drug dealing. The female taxi driver is uncooperative and head is swerving so I pull her over. She does not want to go to the usual spot. Even as the building where the female is holding down the cash registers, he hangs his head down and jangles his keys. My partner appears in his cruiser. We park at a closer parking lot. Back at the N14 he bumps her license and I get out of my car. I carry my C.I. a Bureau ballpoint pen. She gets out of her cab and up the stairs, and then down the hall and enters the first door. I knock, then stand back from my partner with my right hand on the barrel of my riot gun. I am trying to get a look at the license from the inside; it appears it has expired. I knock once, slowly and in an official manner. "Police," I call loudly. I receive no answer and hear movement in the area and see a two sided mirror. Two male faces are looking in my direction. The doors open. "Police," I say, and again, assertively. Standing feet from him I display my badge, and ask

Mark - this morning I was told by Joe Stepenovich that ENE was holding a little over $100 million in gas positions at the border. I do not know whether they have these positions in their own books, but if they do, they will have to unwind them, add back the cost and then book the new amount at trading. Caroline - today I was talking to Duke's Scheduling analyst about how much they would have moved to the PNR because of balancing obligations. He indicated that they were constantly balancing - if the balance was too much gas coming into the PNR, it was probably the result of them bringing in more gas for their pool. And, to verify, I asked him how much gas would they have to sell in order to balance. He said "a little over $100 million."
