El hombre de ojos verdes.. C: Elegido.Q: Cannot call some functions, in c++ I am trying to make something as simple as this: class Animal { public: bool run(); }; But I am getting the error "function declared within class must be 'public' " and "incomplete type is not allowed". I don't understand why this won't work since it is already defined, and even when I add the public keyword it doesn't work. My main program is quite long, and this is one part of it, I just want to make sure that in my main program I have something like this: Animal myCat; myCat.run(); Is there a way to do this? Thanks. A: C++ does not allow you to declare a function within a class definition. So that would give an error. To get around that error you would need to have the function outside of the class. A: To make function private, you can use private keyword in the function body. I was under impression that class cannot have functions and variables and those are used only to make the class. class Animal { public: bool run(); private: std::string getName(); }; by Jay Bauman Menu The City Most of my stories are set in the desert, mostly, in and around the Colorado River and the Joshua Tree wilderness. I've always considered that desert hard, rough and unforgiving. But most of us have lived in the cities, where the dirt, grime, and filth of the desert are a lot closer. There's something about living in the city, besides the actual city, the blight and the noise that stays with me. I remember when I moved to Colorado and first experienced the desert, I fell in love with it. It had a peace, a silence, an intimacy that I'd never encountered before. Sitting in
